CONFERENCE SECRETARIAT NEW ZEALAND CENTRE FOR PUBLIC LAW

The New Zealand Centre for Public Law was established at Victoria Law School in 1996. Its director is Professor Matthew Palmer, Victoria University of Wellington's Dean of Law. The Centre's objectives are to stimulate awareness and interest in public law issues, provide a forum for the discussion of such issues, and foster and promote research. In pursuance of these goals, the Centre organises a year round programme of workshops, public seminars and lectures, conferences, distinguished visitors and research projects.

History

ANZSIL was established in 1992. Its secretariat is based at the Centre for International and Public Law at the Australian National University in Canberra. The aims of ANZSIL include providing a forum for discussion of research and practice in international law and increasing awareness of international law. This is the eleventh annual conference organised by the Society and the second to be held in Wellington.
